

YONKERS POWER STATION

MONUMENTAL RUIN ON THE HUDSON

THE MUNICIPAL ART SOCIETY
OF NEW YORK PRESENTS

Yonkers Power Station: Monumental Ruin on the Hudson

Photographs by Tom Rinaldi & Rob Yasinsac

An exhibition on view at The Municipal Art Society
September 7 through November 1, 2006

Built to supply electricity for trains entering and leaving Grand Central Terminal, today the Yonkers Power Station is a testament to the industrial heritage that lines the banks of the Hudson River and is a prime candidate for adaptive re-use. This photographic exhibition documents the power station in its present ruined state. It is accompanied by a newly published book, Hudson Valley Ruins: Forgotten Landmarks of an American Landscape, by Tom Rinaldi and Rob Yasinsac, published by University Press of New England.

Opening Reception: Tuesday, Sept. 12, 6:00 - 8:00 p.m.

Panel Discussion: Tuesday, Oct. 17, 6:30 - 8:00 p.m.
